FORT MASON CENTER

January 1989

A GARDEN OF THE MIND

The past year was filled with many significant accomplishments. Collectively, they brought Fort Mason to a new level of prominence in the cultural and educational life of Bay Area residents. And as 1989 begins, we can look forward to a number of projects that will take the Center further along the road to becoming the facility we all wish it to be.

In past years, I have written of the Center's progress and successes, and this year is no different. However, many other observers of Fort Mason have commented on their own experiences here, and this year I would like to begin by reproducing some of these observations. It is particularly gratifying to have such a wide variety of publications writing so positively about the Center. And it has always struck me that each commentator has something different and personal to say about Fort Mason. Together, these observations suggest why, in such a short time, Fort Mason has become an institution so integral to our cultural life that people take it for granted, and cannot imagine the Bay Area without Fort Mason.

"Today Fort Mason flourishes as a public destination. Scores of cultural, social and environmental nonprofit agencies operate there. Fort Mason, not Civic Center, is the true cultural hotspot of San Francisco, a prophetic place where the future is evoked and struggled for in ways at once symbolic and practical....Just a short time ago Fort Mason was a forlorn, abandoned place. Today it is on the cutting edge of whatever it means to be Northern California."

Kevin Starr
"East of the Pacific"
Image Magazine

"The constant growth of the facilities and uses of Fort Mason is phenomenal....Last year over a million and a half people attended over 14,000 events which took place at the Fort. As the spaces continue to be restored and remodeled, the numbers keep climbing....New spaces, however exciting, are only a tiny fragment of the present and future Fort Mason story, though. The 50 resident and more than 450 non-resident groups using Fort Mason facilities each year - that is, the people - are the heart of the story. These organizations and their energetic founders and members have made Fort Mason the hub of Northern California's arts, entertainment, environmental, media, and advocacy activities."

Joseph Bean
"Fort Mason Center: A Continuous Celebration"
San Francisco Progress

"The convergence of location, funding and organization has made Fort Mason a model facility that is envied and studied all over the world. When this reporter visited an arts organization at Fort Mason a delegation from Australia trooped in unannounced. They were planning a similar arts center for New South Wales and wanted to see what a real-life arts Oz looked like. All told, representatives from 50 countries have made pilgrimages to Fort Mason."

David Armstrong
"The Arts in the City: nonprofit organizations - San Francisco's real giants"
San Francisco Examiner

"The latest jewel in the Bay Area's cultural crown is the sparkling complex at Fort Mason....Cities throughout the world want their own Fort Mason...we're lucky to have it in our own back yard!"

Rose Guilbault
KGO-TV editorial

"A visit to Fort Mason is like a visit to Utopia. Imagine a community of people playing and working together to create a cultural center for lifelong learning, social activism and involvement in the arts. Now throw in some free parking - and you've got a good picture of what Fort Mason is all about."

Nora Villagran
"A user's guide to Fort Mason: Utopia by the Bay"
San Jose Mercury News

"The transformation of Fort Mason reflects the very best of San Francisco. It has served as a national model for converting surplus facilities, and it has spawned imitators around the world."

Editorial
"Renewal for Fort Mason"
San Francisco Examiner

"What brings nearly two million visitors a year to Fort Mason is a unique assortment of crafts, culture and creativity without commercialism, a microcosm of the diversity of the arts and interests of San Francisco reflecting the interests of a far wider world: a garden of the mind whose roots spread to Monterey Bay and Mexico, to Europe and Africa and beyond."

Patrick Franklin
"San Francisco's Fort Mason: A Felicitous Mix"
The Monterey Herald

These compliments result from twelve years of steady progress in the evolution of Fort Mason as a program and as a facility. A number of developments on each of these fronts took place during 1988, making it one of our most successful years. I would like to mention some of 1988's highlights, and point to some of our plans for 1989 and beyond.

It is important to emphasize that the success of Fort Mason can be attributed to the combined efforts of our 50 resident organizations, the 450 other organizations that use Fort Mason each year, the public attending events and suggesting new ideas to us, the support of the media, the many generous financial supporters listed in these pages, the GGNRA staff, and the Fort Mason Foundation Board of Directors and staff. The needs and interests of each of these constituencies are always considered in decisions which affect Fort Mason today and into the future.

Events The list of outstanding events at Fort Mason continues to grow, with many returning year after year and many new ones added each year. Returning events included the San Francisco Fall Antiques Show, the Guardsmen Christmas Tree Sale, the San Francisco Landscape Garden Show, the San Francisco Art Institute Graduate Exhibition, the Friends of the Library Annual Book Sale, the Reggae Explosion, the Pacific States Craft Fair, the Cajun Festival, the San Francisco Blues Festival, the Indian Arts and Crafts Fair, Folk Art International, the Afghanistan Refugee Rug Exhibit, Macy's Passport to Fashion Show, and the Free Folk Music Festival.

New events included the Italian Consulate's Concorso Auto Show, City of Hope's Fitness Fair, the Friends of the River Auction and Raffle, a benefit for Bread and Roses, the Carousel Show, the Juneteenth Celebration, the Hikari exhibit of Japanese sculptor Biko, and many more.

Programs Fort Mason's 50 resident groups have continued to grow in the quality of their programs and their audiences. New additions to the Fort Mason community - the San Francisco Architectural Club, the Rainforest Health Alliance, the National Center for Financial Education and the Earth Island Institute - promise to add variety and depth to the Center's program, and to bring new audiences to Fort Mason. Some of the 450 non-resident groups who have been presenting their programs at Fort Mason for ten years have branched out into new areas in response to the developing interests and growth of their audiences.

All the indicators regarding the Fort Mason program point to a very healthy, balanced and quality institution with its best years still to come.

Capital improvements and renovations
The aspects of our operation in which growth and improvement have been most evident for the past year - and will continue to be for the next few years - are the capital improvements and renovations occurring on a regular basis. Some are more obvious than others, and each affects a different audience at Fort Mason. Below are some of the projects you may encounter as you move about the Center in the coming months.

- Friends of the Library has completed and opened the Book Bay Bookstore on the ground floor, south end, of Building C.
- Blue Bear School of Music has remodelled the Marina Music Hall in Building D.
- A Coffee Gallery has been opened in the lobby of Building B for folks who need a place to sit down and have a sandwich, tea, or some conversation. Exhibits are provided by the Fort Mason Art Center faculty and students.
- Media Alliance has consolidated its operation in Building D by remodelling the space and bringing Computer Alliance over from Building E.
- The Festival Pavilion (Pier 3) and the Herbst Pavilion (Pier 2) officially opened to rave reviews for the dramatic yet simple transformation.

Coming in 1989:

- The much-awaited opening of the 440-seat Cowell Bayfront Theater will occur this spring. This promises to spark tremendous new performing arts activity at Fort Mason, with dance, theater, concerts and film productions being scheduled for 1989.
- The entire parking lot will be resurfaced and redesigned this spring, and we hope to see new graphics to go along with the fresh appearance of our site.
- Improvements in public spaces in Buildings C and D are also expected to commence this spring.

Fort Mason Center is now twelve years old. There is a very positive mix at this time of established groups and new groups using our facilities, return activities and first-time productions. Our Board of Directors has added ten new members in the past two years to complement the thirteen who have served from six to nine years.

There is continuity and stability, openness and opportunity for change; there are new ways of seeing Fort Mason. Throughout all the changes and successes there have been the many people like you who have used Fort Mason for many different purposes since it opened in January 1977. We appreciate your interest and support for our programs and activities. We hope you recognize the vital role you have played in creating the cultural center that the quotes at the opening of this article praise so well.

Thank you.

As a result, at various, and unfortunately unpredictable, times during the next six months you may find loud construction noises, mud puddles, and temporary detours.
